

Healthcare Workforce Stress, Burnout, and Resiliency

Friday, June 17, 2022

1:00-2:30pm ET

12:00-1:30pm CT

11:00am-12:30 pm MT 10:00-11:30am PT

Hosted by HRSA's Office of Intergovernmental and External Affairs-Denver

This FREE Webinar is designed for healthcare workers, students, trainees, provider organizations, and healthcare settings.

DESCRIPTION:

The purpose of this webinar is to discuss mitigating the negative impacts of the COVID-19 pandemic and current healthcare environment on the healthcare workforce, and promote resiliency among healthcare workers. Stress and mental health, compassion fatigue, and trauma experienced by healthcare professionals will be defined and discussed, and healthcare resiliency will be delineated. Speakers will highlight different perspectives on healthcare worker stress and resiliency related to health systems research, a framework for workplace resiliency, and moral injury within the context of the healthcare workforce. Examples and resources will be provided. Presenters include experts from the Thomas Jefferson University School of Medicine College of Population Health and the Moral Injury of Healthcare organization, as well as clinical staff from HRSA's Office of Intergovernmental and External Affairs.

To Register: <https://bit.ly/3lhE7fK>

For questions, contact KPatton@HRSA.gov